Mason heard of a lesbian couple with a child -- the mother of the child still dressed as a man. This proved to be the seed from which this play grew (2 acts, 1 man, 2 women). V. 12 contains: The Archer...Christmas, 1877. The stray lambby Thorne SmithThe Stray Lamb by Thorne Smith This gem of a book tells the tale of Mr. Lamb, an ordinary man who leads an ordinary life, until a chance encounter leads to him experiencing the world through the eyes of various animals. MR. T. LAWRENCE LAMB weaved his long, shad-bellied body down the aisle and, as one sorely stricken in affliction, crumpled into a seat. He hoped prayerfully that the other half of it would remain unoccupied. He hoped even more prayerfully that if it should be occupied it would not be by anyone he knew even remotely. Every evening he hoped this and almost every evening his hope was disregarded.Mr. Lamb automatically elevated his knees. Out came his paper and off went the train. All set. Another day smeared.He sighed profoundly. So far so good. No one had yet encroached upon his Jovian aloofness. Perhaps for a change he would get the best of the break. Adjusting his features in what he fondly believed to be a repellent expression he prepared to concentrate his attention on the financial section of his newspaper. His heart was not in it. Neither was his mind. Lamb was in a vagrant mood--misanthropic, critical, at odds with himself."Here we sit," he mused--his eyes darkly contemplating his fellow commuters--"Here we sit, the lot of us, a trainful of spines in transit... so many sets of vertebrae, each curved and twisted according to the inclination of its individual owner."His eyes rested unenthusiastically on a man he heartily disliked, Simonds, a purveyor of choice lots."Take Simonds there," he continued to reflect. "That spawn of hell is just a lot of vertebrae all curled up, I myself am scarcely more than a column of vertebrae. And that old lady over there, she's a repository of vertebrae, old tortured vertebrae, no doubt extremely brittle... museum pieces."He sighed morbidly over the great age and brittleness of the old lady's vertebrae, and rearranged his own, flexing them deftly between the seat and its back. His knees crept up higher in front of him. His head sank lower. He was gradually jack-knifing into his favorite commuting position.For some inexplicable reason vertebrae this evening seemed unusually important to Lamb. They were almost getting the best of him. The more he thought of vertebrae the lower his spirits ebbed. There were too many commuters, all trying to contort themselves into the most comfortable, the most restful positions--all striving to do well for their backs after the strain of the day. He sighed profoundly. So far so good. No one had yet encroached upon his Jovian aloofness. Perhaps for a change he would get the best of the break. This gem of a book tells the tale of Mr. Lamb, an ordinary man who leads an ordinary life, until a chance encounter leads to him experiencing the world through the eyes of various animals. Thorne Smith again shows his mastery of the comic fantasy tale as Lamb lurches from one mishap to another, reeling from his wife's abandonment and the actions of his headstrong daughter and reveling in the new opportunities that his excursions into animal form provide. This book is the true story of the author's life written in her own words. It expresses her battle with depression inexorably intolerable when connected to the fact that her soul was lost. Through this book, you will come to understand or be reminded that God does not let go of His children. He will chase you, little sheep, and bring you back to the fold. Your sin is never deeper than His reach.
